From the above statement it will be seen that during the past seventeen years deposits have increased to an amount nearly four times as much as they were and that the total footings of the balance sheet are nearly three times as much as they were in 1895. While the capital stock has not doubled, the surplus and profits are nearly three times what they were in 1895. The overdrafts in 1895, with only about $14,000,000 on deposit, were $114,887, while in 1912, with deposits of over $53,000,000, the overdrafts amounted to only $120,483:52. In 1895 there were only eighty-five State banks in Virginia; in June, 1912, there were 247.
